

Studies in the History of Gardens & Designed Landscapes

Formerly the Journal of Garden History

EDITOR

John Dixon Hunt, University of Pennsylvania, USA

Supported by an International Editorial Advisory Board.

Studies in the History of Gardens & Designed Landscapes addresses itself to readers with a serious interest in the subject, and is now established as the main place in which to publish scholarly work on garden history. While the journal's main emphasis is on documentation of individual gardens in all parts of the world, articles on other topics - iconography, aesthetics, botany and horticulture, technology, social and economic history, conservation and restoration of historic gardens, geography, history of ideas - are welcomed. From time to time issues are centered around themes, for example, the Anglo-Dutch garden in the age of William and Mary, eighteenth-century gardens of the Chesapeake, and gardens of the Ancient Mediterranean, and rediscovering the British garden. The Journal is renowned for the quality of its book reviews.

This journal is also available online.

ACADEMIC POSITION
UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA
Assistant/Associate Professor of Landscape Architecture

The University of Virginia invites applications for assistant or associate level professor beginning in Fall 2002. Candidates must be strong designers with professional and/or teaching experience in one of two areas:

- Computer related design methods (digital landscape representation, terrain modeling)
- Natural systems, landscape ecology

Teaching responsibilities may include graduate level studios and technical courses as well as opportunities for developing courses in the candidate's area of interest. Candidates should have a professional degree in landscape architecture or a related field and proven ability in research or creative practice.

The University of Virginia offers a graduate degree in landscape architecture (M.L.A.), as well as an undergraduate minor open to all students in the University. Landscape Architecture is one of four departments in the School of Architecture. The School is distinguished by a unique interdisciplinary culture—strong ties exist with the other disciplines of Architecture, Architectural History and Urban and Environmental Planning. Dual masters degree programs are established with all three disciplines. There are many opportunities for cross-disciplinary teaching and research. The department has a strong design focus, emphasizing both conceptual investigation—grounded in the study of history and theory—and physical making and building, supported by the ecology and technology curriculum. The technology and studio sequences are closely integrated.

Please submit a letter of interest, curriculum vitae, selections from a portfolio and/or copies of published papers, and name of three references (include phone and email address). Materials will be reviewed beginning October 1, 2001. The review will continue until the position is filled. Applications should be sent to: Elissa Rosenberg, Chair, Department of Landscape Architecture, University of Virginia School of Architecture, Campbell Hall, P. O. Box 400122, Charlottesville, VA 22904-4122 (rosenberg@virginia.edu).

Women and minority candidates are encouraged to apply. The University of Virginia is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

SCHOOL OF LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE
LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY
GRADUATE PROGRAM

The Master of Landscape Architecture program at Louisiana State University provides students with the opportunity to explore the role of nature, culture, and individuals in shaping the built environment through the activity of design. The Lower Mississippi Valley, a rich cultural and natural region, serves as a laboratory for examination of the processes of landscape evolution and design.

LSU is a Research University 1, placing it in the top 2 percent of the nation's colleges and universities. The MLA program belongs to the Southern Academic Common Market, which provides students from five southern states resident tuition. Assistantships and other financial aid are available to students.

Study tracks for students with degrees in design fields also accommodate a first professional degree with bachelor's degrees from other fields accommodate a range of individual student interests.

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
Department of Landscape Architecture

The University of Minnesota invites applications and nominations for a tenure-track assistant professor, tenured associate professor or tenured full professor position in the Department of Landscape Architecture of the College of Architecture and Landscape Architecture. The Department's degree programs and faculty research strive to integrate an artistic understanding of landscape architectural design with an ecological knowledge of natural and cultural systems. We seek a scholar or a practitioner whose work is well informed by natural phenomena, ecology and technology and who has a passion for teaching. The successful applicant will possess some combination of teaching skills and research/practice experience that will enable her/him to impart the knowledge and skills necessary to engage successfully in the practice of landscape architecture in the 21st century as well as to expand the knowledge and skill base of the profession.

This appointment is for a full-time, 9-month position. The Department is positioned to allow the candidate to engage in the numerous applied research, outreach and practice opportunities available in Minnesota. There is an option of a 25% annually renewable leave without pay to pursue creative professional work for the appointment. In addition, summer augmentation money will be available to support the appointee's scholarly endeavors. We encourage the candidacy of people with an interest in interdisciplinary scholarship and community outreach in multi-cultural settings. Women and people of color are strongly encouraged to apply. Salary level will be commensurate with experience.

Qualifications

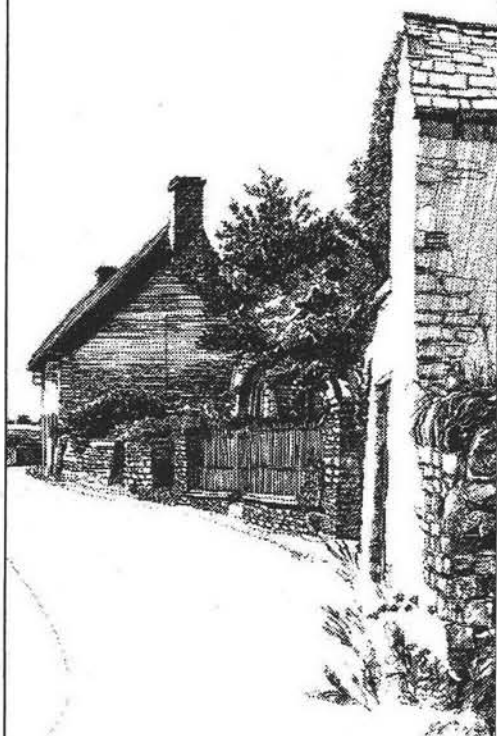

Required: 1) Professional M.L.A. degree or B.L.A. with an advanced degree or M.S.L.A.; 2) teaching experience in a landscape architecture program; and 3) scholarly inquiry or professional practice that demonstrates promise for excellence in the integration of the science of ecology with the art of landscape architectural design. Candidates holding the Ph.D. who are focused on ecologically based design are strongly encouraged to apply. Candidates' accomplishments will be judged with consideration to their years of experience in teaching or practice.

Applications

Initial screening of application materials will begin on January 21, 2002 but the search will remain open until the position is filled which is expected to occur in August of 2002. Applications should contain five components, including: 1) a statement of philosophy and approach to teaching, scholarship and design in landscape architecture; 2) a resume or curriculum vita; 3) three letters of reference; 4) examples of professional and scholarly work; and 5) examples of work that demonstrate the candidate's teaching effectiveness. Applicants are responsible for having all application materials, including the three letters of reference, sent to the Department. Please contact the Department for more information. Applicants should forward all application materials and have the three letters of reference sent directly to:

The Gardens of Gertrude Jekyll

Richard Bisgrove

“The Gardens of Gertrude Jekyll serves as a living complement to her gardening ideas, indicating the scope and variety her gardening vision could assume. Richard Bisgrove has mined extensive archives for Jekyll’s most effective planning schemes, and illustrates them with photographs of her existing gardens. He helpfully divides chapters by types of garden including formal gardens, rose gardens, wild gardens, steps and walks, and sun and shade.”—Literary Review

GRADUATE STUDIES IN LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE AT THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON

The Department of Landscape Architecture is located on the campus of the University of Wisconsin-Madison. The graduate student in Landscape Architecture has access to a wide range of facilities and scholars from nearly every discipline, reflecting the University of Wisconsin-Madison's worldwide reputation for education quality. The Department offers both a Master of Science (MSLA) and a Master of Arts (MALA) in Landscape Architecture.

Some 3700 courses are offered by more than 125 departments located on the Madison campus. Students take advantage of nationally ranked campus libraries, the resources of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin; the facilities of the Madison Area Computing Center; the Center for Restoration Ecology at the University Arboretum; the collections for the Elvehjem Museum of Art; and the resources of Wisconsin state government.

The graduate program in Landscape Architecture is based on the premise that research and teaching should generate and synthesize new information for the purpose of raising the performance level in landscape planning, management, and design. The graduate program is particularly known for its instruction and research in cultural resource preservation and landscape history; plant community assessment, management, and restoration; and the integration of cultural and natural resources in developing solutions for landscape problems.

Midwestern Landscape Architecture

Edited by William H. Tishler

This collection profiles the bold innovators in landscape architecture who ventured into the nation's heartland 100 years ago to develop a new style of design celebrating the native midwestern landscape.

"Tishler has done a tremendous service to his profession and to the general public by assembling many of the best landscape historians in North America as contributors. . . . They make history come to life and give personal and historical substance to issues that are usually presented only as outlines or lists of chronological facts."
