

PRESERVING CULTURAL LANDSCAPES IN AMERICA

edited by Arnold R. Alanen and Robert Z. Melnick

foreword by Dolores Hayden

A distinguished group of contributors addresses the complex academic and practical questions that arise when people set out to designate and preserve a cultural landscape.

Center Books on Contemporary Landscape Design: Frederick R. Steiner, Consulting Editor; George F. Thompson, Series Founder and Director

264 pp., 70 illus., $22.50 paper

THE REDROCK CHRONICLES

Saving Wild Utah

T. H. Watkins

"What is most original is the combination of geology, geography, law, cultural insights, and clear intention—if we are to save the redrock country we must know all we can about it."—John B. Wright, author of Rocky Mountain Divide: Selling and Saving the West and Montana Ghost Dance: Essays on Land and Life

Center Books on Space, Place, and Time: George F. Thompson, Series Founder and Director

176 pp., 42 photos, $24.95 paper

THE EUCALYPTUS

A Natural and Commercial
History of the Gum Tree

Robin W. Doughty

"Doughty's work treats the spread of eucalypts in a balanced manner, citing both positive and negative aspects of the trees' promotion and use. The book is skillfully written, well organized, and well paced, pulling the reader from chapter to chapter as the story unfolds."—Gay M. Gomez, author of A Wetland Biography

Center Books in Natural History: Shannon Davies, Consulting Editor; George F. Thompson, Series Founder and Director

256 pp., 45 illus., $39.95 cloth

CREATING THE NORTH AMERICAN LANDSCAPE

Gregory Conniff, Bonnie Loyd, Edward K. Muller, and David Schuyler, Consulting Editors
George F. Thompson, Series Founder and Director

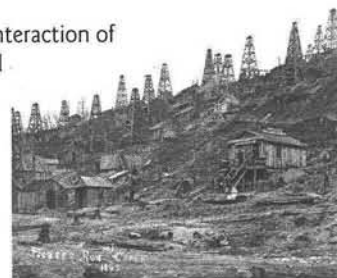

PETROLIA

The Landscape of America's First Oil Boom

Brian Black

"A valuable analysis of the interaction of technology, speculation, and greed in desecrating the western Pennsylvania landscape during the nation's first oil boom."
—Joel A. Tarr, Carnegie Mellon University

248 pp., 52 illus., $42.50 cloth

SILENT SCREENS

The Decline and Transformation of the American Movie Theater

Michael Putnam

with an introductory essay by Robert Sklar

Read Chapter One at www.press.jhu.edu

"Putnam's strikingly beautiful photographs document American movie theaters and the passing of that era in American culture. They penetrate the barrier that traditionally separates significant aesthetic achievement and historical events."

—James L. Enyeart, Director, The Marion Center for Photographic Arts at the College of Santa Fe

120 pp., 82 photos, $39.95 cloth

LET THE COWBOY RIDE

Cattle Ranching in the American West

Paul F. Starrs

"Starrs's magisterial book redefines our understanding of the neglected subject of western livestock ranching. He shows the centrality of ranching in the complex and contentious relationship between fiercely independent westerners and historic federal government policies."—John Opie, author of Nature's Nation

384 pp., 130 illus., $18.95 paper

SMALL CREATURES & ORDINARY PLACES

A NEW BOOK BY ALLEN M. YOUNG

These charming essays reveal to us the beauty and value of hornets, bats, katydids, mice, cicadas, and other tiny dwellers in our own backyards.

Entomologist Allen Young records his keen observations of the natural world as he walks through an urban woods near the Lake Michigan shore, or sits on his deck facing his backyard.

Department of Landscape Architecture

Assistant Professor of Landscape Architecture

Applications are invited for a tenure-track faculty position at the UW-Madison that features community design and planning. Eighty percent of the annual appointment is with University of Wisconsin-Cooperative Extension, a federal/state/local partnership that provides educational programming in the area of community, natural resources, and economic development. The remaining twenty percent of the position involves instructional activities in the Department of Landscape Architecture. Research and scholarly activities must be integrated into both extension and instructional duties. A major responsibility of the position is the identification and development of student projects that address local planning needs, primarily through the supervision of a two-semester capstone seminar and studio that links undergraduate senior students with Wisconsin's rural and urban communities. Three years of public/private practice experience, as well as general expertise in community design and planning processes, design review, and policy development and implementation are expected. Familiarity with GIS and CAD and grant writing is required. Depending upon qualifications, the starting salary will be in the vicinity of $60,000/year.

The successful candidate will develop and carry out an active and highly visible Cooperative Extension and scholarship program that considers design review and planning methodologies, participatory processes for citizens, and comprehensive land-use planning and policies. Travel throughout the state is required since the candidate will provide communities and interest groups with educational assistance in developing and understanding design review processes that have applicability in landscape and site design. The candidate must demonstrate an ability to communicate effectively with elected and appointed officials and local citizens who possess diverse interests.

A Ph.D. in Landscape Architecture, Urban & Regional Planning, Architecture, Geography, or a related field is required. At least one degree must be from an accredited program in landscape architecture. Applicants must submit, by 15 October 2000, a résumé; statement of extension, teaching, and research goals; a portfolio or three to five copies of representative publications; and the names and addresses of at least three references to:

Dr. Arnold R. Alanen (608-263-3956)

The UW-Madison is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Applications from women and minority candidates are especially encouraged.

GRADUATE STUDIES IN LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE AT THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON

The Department of Landscape Architecture is located on the campus of the University of Wisconsin-Madison. The graduate student in Landscape Architecture has access to a wide range of facilities and scholars from nearly every discipline, reflecting the University of Wisconsin-Madison's worldwide reputation for education quality. The Department offers both a Master of Science (MSLA) and a Master of Arts (MALA) in Landscape Architecture.

Some 3700 courses are offered by more than 125 departments located on the Madison campus. Students take advantage of nationally ranked campus libraries, the resources of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin; the facilities of the Madison Area Computing Center; the Center for Restoration Ecology at the University Arboretum; the collections for the Elvehjem Museum of Art; and the resources of Wisconsin state government.

The graduate program in Landscape Architecture is based on the premise that research and teaching should generate and synthesize new information for the purpose of raising the performance level in landscape planning, management, and design. The graduate program is particularly known for its instruction and research in cultural resource preservation and landscape history; plant community assessment, management, and restoration; and the integration of cultural and natural resources in developing solutions for landscape problems.

SCHOOL OF LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY GRADUATE PROGRAM

The Master of Landscape Architecture program at Louisiana State University provides students with the opportunity to explore the role of nature, culture, and individuals in shaping the built environment through the activity of design. The Lower Mississippi Valley, a rich cultural and natural region, serves as a laboratory for examination of the processes of landscape evolution and design.

LSU is a Research University 1, placing it in the top 2 percent of the nation's colleges and universities. The MLA program belongs to the Southern Academic Common Market, offering students from five southern states resident tuition. Assistantships and other financial aid are available to qualified applicants.

Study tracks for students with degrees in design fields and for those seeking a first professional degree with bachelor's degrees from other fields accommodate a range of individual student interests.

The University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

School of Architecture and Department of Landscape Architecture announce the offering of the Doctor of Philosophy degree in Architecture and Landscape Architecture

with concentrations in either

History & Theory or Cultural & Behavioral Factors in Design

for admission commencing the Fall of 2001

Architecture and Landscape Architecture at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, are two of the older and more distinguished professional degree programs in North America. Both benefit from internationally distinguished faculty and from one of the largest academic libraries in the world with more than ten million volumes and state of the art electronic access to archival and data-base information, as well as access to major collections in nearby cities.

Future success of the disciplines demands an expansion of the available knowledge and new intellectual approaches to broader areas of concern. History and Theory are critical to shaping the professions as well as the social context in which they operate. Behavioral and Cultural Factors are critical in designing for diverse and globalizing societies. The program emphasizes both interdisciplinary study and cross disciplinary inquiry, drawing upon faculty and resources in anthropology, art history, cultural studies, environmental psychology, geography, horticulture, leisure studies, and urban and regional planning, as well as the parent disciplines.

Admission requirements include the submission of an application with academic transcripts, letters of recommendations from individuals with whom the applicant has studied, the GRE general exam, and TOEFL results when required.

Deadline for receipt of applications for next fall is 15 January 2001, although application may be made any time for later admission. Successful applicants may receive a fellowship, assistantship, and/or tuition and fee waiver to help defray their expenses. Please address inquiries to:

UNCOMMON GROUND

Architecture, Technology, and Topography

David Leatherbarrow

"An impressive and important book. The bringing together of the dual topics of siting and construction and the tracing of them through some exemplary works of modern architecture, make this a work that addresses both the theory and practice of architecture; as such, it will surely be a much-read book by both university and professional audiences." — John Dixon Hunt, The Graduate School of Fine Arts, University of Pennsylvania

MODERN LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE

A Critical Review

edited by Marc Treib

"An important resource for serious researchers of the role played by the United States in the development of a modern landscape architecture, this is also a book to be dipped into with great pleasure, sampling here and there." — Elsa Leviser, Architectural Review

INVISIBLE GARDENS

The Search for Modernism in the American Landscape

by Peter Walker and Melanie Simo

Invisible Gardens is a composite history of the individuals and firms that defined the field of landscape architecture in America from 1925 to 1975, a period that spawned a significant body of work combining social ideas of enduring value with landscapes and gardens that forged a modern aesthetic.
