New From The Cultural Landscape Foundation®

AFRICAN AMERICAN CULTURAL LANDSCAPES GUIDE

Featuring more than 150 sites associated with African American cultural lifeways, the ever growing digital What's Out There Guide to African American Cultural Landscapes also includes nearly 30 biographies of those that have shaped these sites including landscape architects, architects, gardeners, and horticulturists, and nine organizational themes, such as "Impacts of African Cultures on the American Landscape" and "Commemoration and Healing." The guide, part of TCLF's broader Race and Space initiative launched in 2020, is optimized for handheld devices, and includes What's Nearby, a GPS-enabled feature that locates all landscapes within a given distance, customizable by mileage or walking time.

JULIE BARGMANN AND CLAUDE CORMIER PIONEERS ORAL HISTORIES

TCLF's newest Pioneers video oral histories feature audacious, irreverent, and innovative landscape architects. Julie Bargmann, the inaugural Cornelia Hahn Oberlander International Landscape Architecture Prize winner, is known as the "Toxic Avenger," "The Queen of Slag," and founder of D.I.R.T. ("Dump It Right There") studio. The late Claude Cormier, dubbed the "Captain of Joy and Wonder," created spaces, especially in Montréal and Toronto, that instantly became crowd-pleasing design icons. Each oral history is parsed into some two dozen short clips organized under the themes of "biography," "design," and "projects."

OBERLANDER PRIZE FORUM VIDEOS

Who are the leaders in addressing the climate crisis in New York City? Women landscape architects. What does it mean to be an "activist practice"? The Oberlander Prize Forums available on TCLF's YouTube page feature courageous, outspoken, inspiring, and principled leaders and activists including Kate Orff, Martha Schwartz, Elizabeth K. Meyer, Gina Ford, and many others addressing major problems, asking probing questions, and proposing bold solutions. "Courageous by Design" and "Landscape Activism" are the first two in an ongoing series of Oberlander Prize Forums, and among numerous conference videos available.
